"Eureka College:
Many larger, few smaller,
none better."
Samuel Harrod (Class of 1903)
Quote by Samuel Harrod, class of 1903, born on this date in 1882.
Samuel Glenn Harrod (Class of 1903) was born on January 5, 1882. After graduating from Eureka College, Harrod was a professor at the College from 1909–43. He was Dean of the Faculty from 1923–26 and Dean of the College from 1936–43.
Many of Dean Harrod's speeches on campus and in the larger community often ended with a mantra that he coined: "Eureka College: Many larger, few smaller, none better."
It was on January 5, 1899, that William A. Poynter (Class of 1867) was inaugurated as Governor of Nebraska. He served one two-year term from 1899–1901. During his inaugural address, Governor Poynter said, "We recognize that the primary power rests in the hands of the people and that this, their will, should at all times be considered supreme. Partisanship may be bitter before election, but the will of the people having been expressed, citizenship should rise above partisanship. It is my most sincere desire that we shall cooperate for the best interests of the state." He died in 1909.
William A. Poynter, Frank Frantz, Ronald W. Reagan, graduates of Eureka College and governors of Nebraska, Oklahoma, and California, respectively.

About Corrymeela
The Corrymeela Community is an open Christian Community that holds a common vision that is expressed in the healing of social, religious and political divisions that exist in Northern Ireland and throughout the world. This vision challenges us to work with those in greatest need in our society and stimulates us to recognise and to work for changes necessary in ourselves and in the structures of our society. Part of this vision unfolds, at our residential centre in Ballycastle, through the diverse programmes that groups experience and of those who reside there.
Corrymeela develops and delivers focused community relations work through single-identity, cross-community and cross-border community, and residentially based programmes. This work can be categorised under five strands – schools work, family work, faith and life, youth work, and community work.
The Corrymeela Community currently has 150 members and over 5,000 friends and supporters throughout the world. Each year over 6,000 participants take part in programmes at the Corrymeela Ballycastle Centre which has facilities for over 100 residents in three units.

HATE pray LOVE

Corrymeela Summer School 2012
Thursday 9th – Sunday 12th August 2012
Corrymeela Centre, Ballycastle

What comes to mind when you read/hear this text?

You have heard it was said, love your neighbour and hate your enemy. But I tell you: love your enemies and pray for those who persecute you, that you may be sons of your father in Heaven.

(Matthew 5 v43–48 NIV)

The 2012 Corrymeela Summer School will explore this text using a variety of different and engaging techniques, including

- Textual analysis
- Meditation/Lectio Divina/Liturgy
- Who is my enemy and how do I pray?
- A Girardian analysis of enmity/rivalry
- Moving Images (film and reconciliation)
- Our story and the text (a creative exploration)

The School will nest these explorations in a weave of song, art, informal chats and fireside story-telling.

Prices:
Residential: £200 | Non-residential: £100

Client: Illinois Mennonite Relief Sale
Promotional website and materials
Role: Print design, website design and initial development
Each year in Canada and the United States, volunteers come together to raise money for Mennonite Central Committee. These events, called relief sales, and related auctions raise funds to help MCC respond to basic needs and work for peace and justice around the world. After an evaluation of the previous website, a new site was built that allowed for a clearer understanding of the purpose of the Illinois Sale, and an easier way to get to that understanding. This may be viewed online at www.ilreliefsale.org.

Client: Eureka College
Primary website redesign
Role: Creative direction, content strategy, information architecture, user interface, and user experience
My initial priority at the start of my tenure at Eureka College was to coordinate the redesign and rebuild of the primary eureka.edu website. From start to publish in six weeks, I was involved in the virtually every aspect of the site's development and maintenance. The site shifted from a static structure with a single editor to a CMS-based site with distributed editing. This may be viewed online at www.eureka.edu.

Client: The Ronald W. Reagan Society of Eureka College
Website redesign and development
Role: Creative direction, design, and development
The Ronald W. Reagan Society exists to support Eureka College in its mission to encourage every person to discover a vision and voice for themselves to learn, serve, and lead in the world. The old site was not mobile-first, and was built using an outdated and non-semantic table-based structure. The new site was rebuilt from the ground up with a more flexible foundation, higher-quality imagery, an emphasis on typography, and clearer user experience. This may be viewed online at reagan.eureka.edu.

Client: Bushbaby
Website and email design and development
Role: Creative direction and art direction
Bushbaby is a small, locally-owned supplier of outdoor clothing and gear for kids. I provided creative direction of the idenity and website. The site, built with Squarespace, allows for the site managers to have control of the content as well as the publishing of a blog. This may be viewed online at www.bushbaby.co.

Client: Venue Art & Wine
Branding, Identity, and general communication
Role: Print design, website design and development, and apparel printing
Venue Art & Wine was an art gallery and wine social located in central Illinois. The space was converted from an old, unused space into a clean and contemporary venue (hence the name). The branding was intended to emulate this modern and minimalistic experience. It hosted a variety of artists and workshops, musicians, and special events, and the website served as a place for interested parties to stay up-to-date.

Client: Eureka College
EC 2014 Year in Review website
Role: Creative direction, website design and development
Each year the Marketing and Communication Department highlights the past year. This has involved a responsive site that allows for quick scanning or in-depth reading of the big stories from around campus. This may be viewed online at www.eureka.edu/2014.

Client: Eureka College Admissions
Prospective student email templates
Role: Design and development
The emails sent to prospective students were out of date, and not consistent with the college's brand. I built a series of mobile-friendly email templates that could be customized to each individual student. They featured consistent calls-to-action and ways to connect with Eureka.

Client: Eureka College
160th anniversary website and blog
Role: Creative direction, design, and development
During the 2015–16 academic year, Eureka College celebrated its 160th anniversary. To help promote this celebration, I built a responsive micro-site, which featured, in part, a weekly blog, which highlighted each week in EC history. The site is built using a a simple, blog-aware, static site generator, which, unlike many other blogs, doesn't require the use of a database. The blog may be viewed online at www.eureka.edu/160/blog.

Client: Sunny Lane Farms
Identity and packaging design
Role: Print design
Sunny Lane Farms is a small farm in central Illinois that grows fruits and herbs in a sustainable and environmentally-friendly manner. A primary focus of the farm lies with aronia berries, which are a fruit high in anti-oxidants. I worked with the client and a local artist to develop imagery specifically displaying the aronia berry. This primary image was then used on a variety of aronia-based products for resale at local farmer's markets and shops.

Client: Indiebike
Online Branding and promotional materials
Role: Design and apparel printing
For five years, I worked with Indiebike, an online cycling apparel business. My role consisted of creating promotional banners which were used as primary images on the website, and also in email marketing. I developed imagery and icons to be used in Indiebike's online site and on their social media outlets.

Client: Peter Adriel
CD packaging
Role: Print design and typography
Peter Adriel is a one-man band, singer-songwriter, and all-around artist based in central Illinois. He has deep ties to the natural world, ecology, and storytelling. Gates of Louisiana is his second album, and the design is intended to communicate his sound and passion for the earth. Through the lyrics and artwork, it tells the story of movement down from a small, local place, to the larger world and beyond.

Client: Limestone Community High School
Theater posters
Role: Graphic design
I worked with the theater department Limestone for several years, producing the posters, tickets, and playbills for their shows. The school is known in the area for having high quality productions, and the promotional materials sought to communicate the same level of quality. The posters are intended to communicate the essence and feel of each show, from a light and airy musical to a dark and suspenseful drama, as shown here.

Client: Barrick-Oltman, Inc.
Identity, promotional materials, website design
Role: Print design, website design and initial development
Barrick-Oltman, Inc. is a locally, family owned heating and cooling business located in central Illinois. One target of their website was to transfer online searches into business. A second goal was for the site to serve as a place where interested parties could learn more about efficiency and make educated decisions about the heating and cooling of their home. This may be viewed online at www.barrickoltman.com.

Client: Zeller Electric
Website design
Role: website design and initial development
Zeller Electric is a locally, family owned electrical service business located in central Illinois. The target of their website was to transfer online searches into business and help viewers understand more about what types of services they offer.

Client: Washington Community High School
Branding, poster design, apparel design and printing
Role: Print design and apparel printing
Panther Professions is a Tech Prep program for high school students to explore a variety of professional disciplines before graduation. The voluntary events allowed for opportunities to meet professionals from different fields, and the materials were intended to pique the interest of seventeen- and eighteen-year-olds. It was decided to give participants free t-shirts to help promote the events and also hopefully give them something to remind them of what they experienced.

Client: Morton High School
Branding, booklet design, apparel design and printing
Role: Print design and apparel printing
Part of my role when teaching at Morton High School was to design and print different materials for student groups and activities. Since their primary color was a bright red, I used it both in the foreground (ink) and in the background (paper and t-shirts). 2016 was a very successful year, with well-know and acceptional teachers retiring, but also for the volleyball team going to the state finals.

Client: The Corrymeela Community / Corrymeela Ballycastle Centre
Environmental graphics
Role: Design
In 2011, The Corrymeela Community, a peace and conflict center located in Northern Ireland, constructed a modern residential building. A part of the interior design for this building was to create wayfinding signage as well as typographic solutions to enhance the warmth of the spaces. Shown here are vinyl wall applications as a part my solution.

Client: The Corrymeela Community / Corrymeela Ballycastle Centre
Event promotions and programs
Role: Print design
Building on Fire was an exploratory residential program with writer and theologist Peter Rollins. Participants studied Rollins' concept of pyrotheology, which essentially claims the central event of Christianity is a fire that burns up all we believe about ourselves. The goal of this project was to help participants navigate through the residential weekend, but also provide them with imagery that tied back into Rollins' focus for the event.
Promoting events and activities for The Corrymeela Community was an ongoing practice. Some were for smaller and last-minute events that were at no cost. Others occured over multiple days and times that required more specific de and different imagery to catch the viewer's attention.
